About The Acacia Fraternity Chapter at Iowa State

About The Acacia Fraternity Chapter at Iowa State: Acacia is a Greek Social Fraternity established at the University of Michigan in 1904 by Master Masons and established at Iowa State University in 1909. It has the distinction of being the only International Fraternity to choose a Greek word as its name rather than Greek letters. Acacians strive to achieve academic excellence and balance in college and throughout their lifetimes. Some of our Chapter's most distinguished alumni include several former faculty and administrators of Iowa State University, including: Albert Storms (former University President), Charles Stange (faculty member and namesake of Stange Rd. in Ames), Spencer Beach (distinguished faculty member and namesake of Beach Avenue in Ames), Anson Marston (former Dean of the College of Engineering and for whom Marston Hall is named), and Virgil Lagomarcino (former Dean of the College of Education and for whom Lagomarcino Hall is named).

Academic Achievement: At Acacia, our top priority is academic achievement for our undergraduate members. Our goal, as a chapter, is to have a semester GPA above a 3.0, above the all university semester average GPA, and above the all-fraternity semester average GPA. To support academic achievement, The Acacians reimburse tutoring expenses for the undergraduate members. Additionally, The Acacians awards academic achievement scholarships each semester: If a member earns a 3.0 to 3.49 GPA, a $200 scholarship is awarded for the following semester; and if a member earns a 3.50 GPA or higher, a $500 scholarship is awarded for the following semester through the University's financial aid office.

Brotherhood: At Acacia, brotherhood amongst our members is the 'why' we exist as a fraternity. Through Acacia, members (both undergraduates and alumni) are part of an organization that spans generations and geography. We're a support system and a connection that creates life-long bonds of friendship.

Human Service: Acacia's motto is "Human Service" and each chapter of Acacia and our members are committed to Human Service. Whether it's through volunteering, raising funds for a local charity, or simply 'giving back' to the local community through being involved—our commitment to Human Service is what sets us apart.

The Acacia Fraternity Chapter House: In August 2020 the undergraduate members of Acacia Fraternity moved into our newly constructed chapter house. With more than 18,000 square feet, this facility provides a home-like atmosphere for 42 men. The Acacia Fraternity Chapter House provides our undergraduate members with modern amenities, including: A recreation room that includes a pool table, ping-pong table, Foosball table, game table and shuffleboard table; A theater room with an 85-inch TV; A gathering space on each of the upper levels equipped with relaxed seating and TVs as well as a kitchenette for members to utilize. There are also several meeting and study rooms throughout the chapter house which members may utilize for studying, working on group projects, or meetings.

The Acacia Fraternity Chapter House at Iowa State University:

Living in Acacia: Living in Acacia provides each member an opportunity to live in either a 2-man or 4-man suite, each furnished with a bed, dresser, designated closet space, and desk. Each suite also has a private full bathroom. For members who live in the chapter house, our meal plan includes 14 meals per week, with milk, salads, breads, and snacks available 24/7. About The Acacians

About the Acacians: The Acacians is a not-for-profit corporation established by the alumni brothers of the Acacia Fraternity Chapter at Iowa State for the purpose of maintaining and providing housing for the undergraduate chapter of Acacia Fraternity. The Chapter House is located at 138 Gray Avenue, Ames, Iowa and has been the 'home-away-from-home' for over 1,000 undergraduates throughout our chapter's nearly 125 years of existence at Iowa State. The Acacians annually award over $40,000 in scholarships to undergraduate members of Acacia Fraternity. The academic and leadership scholarships are funded through generous donations from our alumni brothers who are committed to ensuring the continued academic and leadership success of the undergraduate members of the Acacia Fraternity Chapter at Iowa State. In the mid-2010s, the decision was made by the Acacians to build a new chapter house. Following a multi-year fundraising campaign, the former chapter house (also located at 138 Gray Avenue) was torn down in June 2019 and construction on the new chapter house immediately commenced. Construction and furnishing of the new chapter house was completed on August 1, 2020 and the undergraduate members moved in immediately for the Fall 2020 semester.
